M.Ed., B.Ed. B.Sc.

Environmental Educator
Founder and Director, EYES Project

Lisa (Diz) Glithero is a committed environmental educator. Her formal teaching experience has taken her from Chhomrong, Nepal to the Heiltsuk community of Bella Bella, British Columbia to working as the Education Director for Students on Ice, a Canadian organization that takes international youth on educational expeditions to Antarctica and the Arctic.

In 2004, after completing a Master of Education degree at Queen's University while working for the Outdoor Experiential Education program at the faculty, Lisa founded the EYES Project.

In March 2006, Lisa was 1 of 24 international women to be awarded the "Women of the Earth Award" for her work in environmental education. She is currently a PT Professor with the Faculty of Education at the University of Ottawa and is the Project Manager for an innovative Green Community Development Project in Chelsea, Quebec.

Through sharing her unique experiences and stories as an environmental educator over the past decade, Lisa has motivated thousands of students and educators to understand the urgency of bringing a sustainability imperative into educational pedagogy and practice.

Lisa has been featured in several Canadian magazines including Canadian Living, Elle Canada, Ottawa City Woman, and Coupe de Pouce.
